

As a parent of children with autism and as a person centred planner, it was a pleasure to read Jennie and Suzie's story. To read a journey written with such honesty around the issues raised by personalisation for everyone concerned was heart warming. We all know as parents, we are the main people who will drive our child's right to a full and fulfilling life, Suzie illustrates how you can do this with your community in a solution focused way.

Jennie's story will inspire and enable families to think about the options for their young person in a person centred and practical way. I can't wait to hear of all the success stories of young people who follow in Jennie's footsteps and others like her.
